

A STITCH IN TIME

WHEN JANE SERIO WAS LOOKING FOR a way to distinguish her line of wedding invitations and stationery, she came upon an unusual idea: making fabric-lined invitations with embellishments that look like stitching along the edges. She launched the Larchmont-based Sweet June Paperie in 2012, and the result was so unique and luxurious, her stationery was included in the 2014 Oscar sweep bags. "The invitation sets the tone for any event, and using fabric is a beautiful way to make the invitation for your most important day stand apart from all the rest," Serio says. "It lets guests know that you care about the details." Available at Sweet June Paperie, Larchmont (917) 273-1009; www.sweetjunepaperie.com

NO UNCERTAIN TERMS

IF THE BAND OF GOLD AROUND your finger isn't enough to declare your marital status, you can announce it on your neck as well. Wear designer Sydney Evan's sexy "taken" necklace ($750), which comes in metal of the occasion rose gold, and remove any traces of lingering doubt. Available at Devine by Mikalay, Chappaqua (914) 238-2222; www.devinebymikalay.com

OMG TO LBD

YOU DON'T WANT YOUR bridesmaids to hate their dresses, but you do want them to match your perfect (but very bride!) palette of coral, peach, and pink. What's a bride to do? Durga Kal has come up with a unique solution to the wear-it-again problem: dresses ($250 to $399) that are reversible, with wedding colors on one side and black on the other—just turn it inside out for a completely different look. Long gowns can even be buttoned on the inside to become short cocktail dresses with bubble hems. Available at Durga Kal; www.durga-kal.com

TAKES THE CAKE

COUPLES ON THOSE STORE-BOUGHT cake toppers never look quite right. You're not a generic couple, so you can't be captured in one of those one-size-fits-all cake toppers. One company in Yorktown Heights can fix that with a cake topper that looks much more like you. Mini 3D ME uses 3D printing technology to create a five- or six-inch-tall figure in your likeness ($350)—you just have to strike a pose and be scanned by a high-tech scanner.
